His Life.

Could Not Overcome Habit For death by swallowing Strong Drink and Made Up Mind to End All.

Concerning the suicide of Dr. W. E. Holmes, of Owensboro, the Inquirer Monday said:

After finishing two pages on a letinsurance policies and notes that he held, and also a few lines bequeathing certain property to his wife, and then calling his wife over the telephone Dr. W. E. Holmes, one of the most prominent and well known physicians Owensboro and Daviess county committed suicide shortly after 7 o'clock this morning by swallowing entire contents of a fourof carbolic acid. Death must have been almost instantaneous. and when found by his brother. James Holmes, and his son J. L. Holmes, the doctor was lying on presidential cabinets. He now has servhis back with his legs crossed closely ed fifteen years. The longest previous at the bottom and his hands clasped term of any cabinet officer was credit-

The further fact that he doubtless saw that it was impossible for him to overcome his thirst for strong drink hastened him to end his life.

Dr. Holmes moved his family to Owenshore about three months ago, having purchased the handsome residence Dean on Frederica court He opposed up his office in the rear of Dr. H. E. Believing that a drink of whiskey would quiet his nerves he took a small dram, which was the beginning of the sad catastrophe that Caused him to take his life.

At one time Dr. Holmes was an excessive drinker, but last December three years ago, he made up his mind to cease the habit, and told his wife. so it is said, that if he ever took another drink he would end his life.

Dr. Holmes continued to take his drinks, and for the past four days has been under the influence of liquor and so much on Sunday that his actions were very noticeable not only to his family but to his friends as

At 5 o'colck this morning Dr. Holmes arose and left his home and came at once to his office. As soon phoned to Col. Holmes' residence thinking that he had gone over to see his father, but she was informed that he had not been there. Mrs. Holmes then sent her son James to the office. and he found his father sitting at the desk writing. Dr. Holmes told his son to return home and tell his mother to have breakfast ready by 8 o'clock as he would be there by that time.

Before the young man had time get home, Dr. Holmes went over to Danhauer's drug store and purchased a four-ounce bottle of carbolic acid. The young clerk did not ask Dr. Holmes for what purpose he wanted ed when purchased by physicians. Holmes called up his wife over the telephone and said "goodbye." He then went to his couch, and with the exception of about one table spoonful ravel. of the poison poured in into a glass Strother was summoned, and said that Dr. Holmes had been dead but a few moments, as the body was Over still warm. An examination showed Owensboro Physician Ends that the mouth and lips were badly burned by the acid.

> An inquest was held by Coroner Pennington, and the jury returned a verdict that Dr. Holmes came to his carbolic with suicidal intent.

The body was then removed to the Owensboro Undertaking and Livery asso ciation and prepared for burial.

Dr. Holmes is the son of Col. and Mrs J. M. Holmes, both of whom are in very feeble heatlh. He was born near Habit in Daviess county, and after graduating from Jefferson Medical college of Philadelphta, took up the practice of medicine near Utica, where with the exception of four years residence in California and Colorado, he was engaged 31 years in his profession. He was always a kind hearted and painstaking physician and was never known to refuse to see a natient, regardless of the weather, or whether or not he would get any money for his services, and on this latter account he is said to have hundreds of dollars on his books still owing him.

Among those present were Master Otto A. Breith, of Covington, who made a short address ing the team for its excellent work and congratulating the members on their victory over all other teams in the world, and Grand Secretary R. G. Elliot of this city.

The Auditorium was fittingly decorated for the occasion and the work of the team was carried on without a hitch, the excellent training Captain J. White Guyn having given his being more than compensated for by the cheers which greeted the efforts of the team.

After their successful work at Indianapolis the Merrick Lodge was swamped with letters of congratulation from other lodges and many letters from lodges asking them to come to their towns and put on the work of the first degree. This was impossible, so the Grand Lodge of Kentucky suggested a plan which would give the various lodges the benefit of the work of the Merrick Lodge degree team while they initiated twenty-eight Fellows a chance to witness the work. dressed whiskey agents, according to vitation to the Merrick Lodge team reports made to the police department to give an exhibition at the Aud-Wednesday night. WIDOW OF JUDGE ELLIOTT

Dies At Her Home At Catlettsburg.

Her Husband, a Judge of Court of Appeals. Was Assassinated in The Year 1879.

Catlettsburg, Ky., Feb. 25.-Mrs. Susan J. Elliott, the venerable widow of Judge John Miller Elliott, who was assassinated at Frankfort in 1879, died at her home here at 11:35 o'clock to-day. The burial will be at Frankfort Tuesday, the body to be laid to rest beside the grave of her husband under the shadow of the monument raised by the State in his memory.

Frankfort, Ky., March 2.-Judge John M. Elliott was assassinated in 1879 in this city by Col. Thomas Buford, Henry county. The killing occurred in Ann street at the woman's entrance of the Capital Hotel, Col. Buford had bought a tract of land in Henry county from James Guthrie, and had made a payment of $14,000 on the land. He was unable to meet further payments and the title of the land was questioned. The lower court held the title valid and ordered the land sold for debt. It brought less than the $14,000 and the Appellace Court sustained the sale. Col. Buford was rendered insane because of this loss and determined to kill the members of the Appellate Court, He had made up his mind to kill Judge Pryor. his neighbor, as he felt more agrieved at him than any other member of the bench, but refrained from doing so because Judge Pryor had a family.

Judge Pryor stopped in at the grocery of Lawrence Tobin, a prominent politician of that day, to taste some cider, and Judge Elliott came on to the hotel. Col. Buford was waiting on the opposite side of the street, and when Judge Elliot was about to step on the first step to go into the hotel he called to him. Judge Elliot turned, Col. Buford firing on him with a double-barrel shot gun, the load taking effect in his breast, killing him instantly. Col. Buford came up to where Judge Elliott was lying and, picking up his hat, he placed it under Judge Elliott's head, and felt to see if his heart was beating. Finding that Judge Elliot dead he said:

"Off to the wars again. Home hath no charms for me and battlefields no pain."

By this time W. H. Sneed, who was boarding at the hotel, rushed out and arrested Col. Buford. "Consider yourself under arrest," said

Judge Sneed.

Col. Buford replied: "I surrended to the law."

Judge Sneed remarked: "It's a pity you did not do it two minutes ago:" to which Col. Buford replied, "I have been wronged greatly."

Col. Buford was placed in the jail, and a mob formed to take him from the jail to lynch him.

Governor McCreary was Governor at that time, and ordered the McCreary Guards to the jail, and they dispersed the mob and saved Col. Buford's life. Col. Buford was sent to the asylum at Lexington, but escaped to Jeffersonville, where he remained for a long time, as there was no law to extradite escaped lunatics. Being unable to get support he finally returned to Kentucky and surrendered himself to the asylum autharities where he died.

CHAPTER X.

It was high noon when O'Rourke drove up before the Palace of the Governor-General. Weary, dusty and travel-stained as he was, he hesitated no instant about sending in his name and requesting an interview with the representative of France's sovereign packet had not been found; the sec-

It was obviously the office of a man ental setting. To one side, set in the solid masonry of the wall, was a mascavity well stocked with documents. It occurred to the adventurer that the place of security selected by the Governor-General for anything he held in trust. He built upon it a theory whilst he listened-nor lost a pointand replied to the secretary.

The latter regretted excessively that his excellency was absent: his excellency would undoubtedly be desolated when he returned and found he had missed Colonel O'Rourke.

"He'll be back soon, monsieur?" "Alas, no!" with a shrug. "He is en route for Paris-possibly arrived by this moment-on matters of state."

"And he left?" "Several days since, monsieur." "You know nothing of this package, indorsed with the name of Monsieur authority. O'Rourke drew a long sigh of relief and was abruptly conscious of fatigue and a desire to get away and rest.

"I'm obliged to ye," he said slowly, rising. "I'll have to wait until the Governor returns, I presume. . . . By the way, are ye be any chance acquainted with Monsieur le Vicomte

But certainly; the vicomte was a great friend of his excellency's. He had dined with his excellency something over a week since, just prior to the latter's departure.

'And I take it ye have seen nothing of the gentleman since?"

"On the contrary, monsieur: the vicomte called here but two days ago." It appeared that he had desired some

"R. S. V. P .- The bearer waits." A trap? A subterfuge? A trick to throw him off the scent whilst the two blackguards escaped with their booty? The adventurer frowned darkly over it, dublous. Then, in a flush of recklessness, he selzed a sheet of paper from a near-by desk, scrawled a formal acceptance of the strange invitation, and handed it to the Biskri boy. "All to gain, naught to lose," he summed up the state of mind which had dictated his response; and at sixthirty, with brow and eye serene, he left the hotel in a carriage bound for the suburb of St. Eugene—and heaven knew where besides!

CHAPTER XI.

The Villa d'Orleans proved to be a handsome house of white stone, situgrounds, on a height outside the town, overlooking the Mediterranean complete and elegant seemed the establishment, indeed, viewed from without or within, that O'Rourke's suspicions were stimulated and his certainty that he was being played with resolved into a pretty definite conviction, as he waited in the broad hallway. It was inconceivable that a man like Des Trebes, so reduced as to be under the necessity of stealing-even of stealing so considerable a sum as a hundred thousand pounds—could maintain so imposing an establishment.

His uneasy conjectures were interrupted when the vicomte appeared to welcome his guest. Suave, dressed properly for the occasion, showing traces neither of fatigue nor of his antipathy for O'Rourke, blandly ignor-ing the peculiarities of the situation which his own inexplicable invitation had created, he presented himself in the guise of a gracious host.

"Monsieur," he declared, bowing to O'Rourke (but with a care not to offer his hand), "overpowers me with his condescension and punctuality. I can only regret"-with a significant glance at the bulge of the adventurer's coat—"that he thought it wise to come armed."

"'Tis a habit I find it hard to break meself of." O'Rourke offered the inadequate explanation in a dry and coolish tone.

"It was unnecessary, I assure monsleur."

"Faith, I'm convinced 'twill prove Tactfully the vicomte digressed from the unpleasant topic. "I have asked you here, monsieur," he said with an air of deprecation, "to confer with me on business after we have dined. I trust the arrangement suits your convenience."

"I'm content, monsieur."

"I regret that circumstances prevent me from receiving you under my own roof-tree. The Villa d'Orleans is the property of a dear friend, merely loaned me during my stay in Algiers."

"Ye're fortunate in your choice of friends.

Over his next remark Des Trebes faltered a trifle, with a curious smile that O'Rourke failed to fathom. "Monsieur Glynn," he said, "is—ah—a trifle indisposed—the sun. Nevertheless, I believe he will join us during dinner, if you will be so kind as to excuse

"I could do very well without him." The vicomte caught the eye of a servant and "Dinner is announced," be said. "Do me the honor to ac- aimself and sat down. company me to the table."

In the course of time, as the vicomte had predicted, the Honorable Bertle joined them; and on sight O'Rourke diagnosed the "indisposition" as plain intoxication. The Englishman was deep in his cups, far too deep to ape the urbanity of his host. He favored O'Rourke with a curt nod and a surly look, then slumped limply into a chair and called for champagne, which he drank greedily and with a sullen air. avoiding the vicomte's eye. Before dessert was served he passed into a black humor, and sat mutely glowering at his glass (what time he was not unsteadily filling it) without regard for either of his companions.

When the cloth was cleared and the servants had withdrawn, Des Trebes definitely cast aside pretence. A cigarette between his lips, he lounged in his chair, eyelids drooping over eyes that never left his guest's while either spoke. A cynical smile prefaced his first words.

"So," he said, "the farce is over. Some regard for the conventions was necessary before the servants of my friend, the owner of this villa. Now, we can be natural, Monsieur le Colo-

"Be all means: I cannot say I found the play diverting, despite the skill of your friend's chef. I gather ye wish to get to business? Well-I'm wait-O'Rourke pulled at a cigar, honoring the man with a cat-like attention. He had no longer to watch the honorable; the latter had wilfully relieved him of the necessity.

"You have been then," pursued the vicomte, without further circumlocution, "to the palace of Monsieur le Gouverneur-Generale?"

"I have-unfortunately a few days too late, it seems."

"You are satisfied-?" "I'm satisfied that the Pool of Flame has been stolen."

"Then you will probably believe me when I declare myself the malefactor. It was an easy matter: I purposely brought up the name of Chambret in conversation with the glass. Governor and by him was informed of the existence of the packet-which,

O'Rourke made an impatient gesture, "But with your address and determination too highly and—pardon me if I speak plainly—I despise and hate you too utterly to become willingly your partner."

"Go on-I begin to like ye better. Ye grow interesting." "That does not interest me.

The situation, then, is simplified. Essentially it involves two propositions: first, we cannot combine; second, divided we both fail. While both of us live, mon colonel, the Pool of Flame will never earn its value."

'Tis meself takes exception to that. Let me once get me hands on the stone, monsieur, and I'll back meself against a dozen vicomtes-and

"While I live," the Frenchman stated, unruffled; "you will not touch the Pool of Flame; while you live, I cannot dispose of it to the best advantage. It would seem that one or the other of us must die."

"I am armed," remarked O'Rourke slowly, "if ye mean ye've brought me here to murder me

"Monsieur speaks-pardon-crudely. I asked you, you came of your own will-to fight for the Pool of understanding danced in his eager eyes. "I see you catch my meaning. What I have to propose is this: you will take pen and paper and write the name of the person who offers the reward, with his address. This you will enclose in an envelope, seal, and place in your pocket. The Pool of Flame—you see I trust you—is here."

O'Rourke got upon his feet with an exclamation; the vicomte was playing a bold hand. Before the Irishman had grasped his intention he had thrown upon the table a ruby as large, or larger, than an egg; an exquisite

"You see." The vicomte's cold incisive tones cut the silence. Slowly he extended a hand and took up the great ruby, replacing it in his pocket.

"There is," he said evenly, " a level stretch of grass beyond the veranda. The night, I admit, is dark, but the light from these long windows should be sufficient for us. If you slay me, take the ruby and go in peace: this sot"-with a contemptuous glance at the unconscious honorable-"will never hinder you. If you die, I take the note from your pocket. The issue is fair. Will you fight, Irishman?"

O'Rourke's fist crashed upon the table as he rose. "Fight!" he cried. "Faith, I did not think ye had this in ye. Pistols, shall it be?"

"Thank you," said the vicomte, with a courtly bow, "but I am an indifferent shot. Had you chosen rapiers at Monte Carlo one of us would never have left the field alive."

He went to a side table, returning with a sheet of paper, an envelope, pen and ink. And when O'Rourke had slipped the paper into his pocket he saw the vicomte waiting for him by one of the windows, two naked rapiers, slender and gleaming and long, beneath his arm. As the Irishman came up, with a bow, the Frenchman presented the hilts of both weapons for his choice.

Together and in silence they left the dining-room, strode across the veranda and down, a short step, to the lawn. The vicomte stood aside quickly, bringing his feet together and saluting in the full glare of light.

O'Rourke whipped hilt to chin with Work such as this he loved. The night was pitchy black, the windows barred it with radiance. In the dark spaces between a man might easily blunder and run upon his death. . . . Somewhere in the shadowy shrub-

Which Side are You On.

Flint Springs, Ky., Feb. 19, 1912. Editor, Hartford Republican,

Dear Sir:-The Poet, Longfellow, says Life is real, life is earnest, and the Grave is not its goal." By the inspiring words of the Poet my mind this evening is beckoned into real light of life. I am forced to see life take on a serlous aspect, to see that there is a real battle on the fields of life.

There the question naturally arises between what two opponents are the strifes, and on which side am I to be a participant. I am led to believe that egate would be announced as soon as in this field referred to, there are two Evans, of this place. "I suffered from opposing leaders, under these leaders there are soldiers fighting for them.

> These two leaders are: God and Saan. If we look on the roll of the volunteers under God, we feel the name of virtue, freedom, friendship and charity, On the roll of Satan we find the names of the lust, fornication, tyranny, selfishness and hatred of man kind. We now see that we must be on the side of right or wrong. Each side has weapons. God uses the weapons of a free celar mind, a right heart, and loud speech to oppose lust. Satan uses the weapons of flattering, guile, deceit to oppose virtue, to oppose tyranny. God uses the weapon of enlightment, and advancement, to oppose freedom. Satan uses the weapons of the names of ignorance, and traditional laws.

To oppose selfishness God commands his children to have compassion, to oppose selfishness, Christ died on Cross for the whole world. To oppose friendship Satan uses the weapons of greed, a love for one's self, a love for one's gold more than for one's soul.

This now brings us down to charity; or love of mankind. Oh the belssed word, charity, if only charity could be installed in the hearts of all mankind this world would be a Heaven below To oppose charity Satan uses the weapons, hatred, maalce, guile, hypocracy, evil speaking, envy, strife. We notice the arch opponent of charity is hatred of mankind. We do not mean by this that Satan hates the existence of the human race, he rather gorges that there is a bearing in existence that he can drag down to perdition, but we grow, that he hates to see faith in God that he hates to see hope of eternal life grow, that he hates any good deed whatever that this mortal man may do. All the weapons of the Satanic kingdom are used by this valliant of Satin, his hand is against all mankind. So let use of the army of the Lord rally around the standard of the Lord and help defeat these Satanic foes.

Contributed in love.

According to the cnesus report, there are, at present, only 483 peafowls the whole State of Kentucky. In point of numbers, the bird is stated to decreasing all over the country. If this is correct, it means the practical exdomestics fowls. Who has not watched with delighted eye, the strutting and pluming of the male peafowl as he woos his mate in the springtime? There is no feathered creature, with the possible exception of the bird of Paradise comparable to him in beauty aside from his looks, the peafowl is the king of table-birds. NO ONE STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The celebrated Dr. Abernethy of London was firmly of the opinion that disorders of the stomach were the most prolific source of human ailments in general. A recent medical writer says: "every feeling, emotion and affection reports at the stomach (through the system of nerves) and the stomach is affected accordingly. It is the vital center of the body * * * * ." He continues, "so we may be said to live (through) the stomach." He goes on to show that the stomach is the vital center of the body. For weak stomachs and the consequent indigestion or dyspepsia, and the multitude of various diseases which result therefrom, no medicine can be better suited as a curative agent than

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"Several months ago I suffered from a severe pain right under the breast-bone," writes Mrs. G. M. MURKEN, of Corona, Calif. "Had suffered from it, off and on, for several years. I also suffered from heart-burn, did not know what was the matter with me. I tried several medicines but they did me no good. Finally, I was told it was my liver. I did not dare to eat as it made me worse. Whenever I swallowed anything it seemed that I would faint—it hurt so. I grew very thin and weak from not eating. Was told to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took five bottles of it, and could feel myself getting better from the first dose. I could eat a little without pain and grew strong fast. To-day I am strong and well and can do a big day's work with ease. Can eat everything and have put on flesh wonderfully. I will say to all sufferers write to Dr. Pierce. He has my undying gratitude."

But all agree that she is charming. There is no doubt nates the greatest dressmaking establishment in the world. Madame Paquin assumed 'the dictatorship of the realm of Fashion,' as the phrase-makers will have it ,in December, 1907, upon the death of her husband, that Monsieur Isador Paquin who was very properly decorated by the Minister of Commerce for his services to France through his preeminent genius in his art. Monsleur Isador Paquin was an unknown clerk of the Paris Bourse, and his bride was an equally obsecure little dressmaker at the time of their marriage, about 1891. But shortly after they set up housekeeping, a wealthy patron established them in a dressmaking business, small, but in an excellent location. At that time the great artists of fashlon were wont to hold themselves coldly and mysteriously aloof from their patrons. The newcomers in the field adopted an opposite policy. Monsieur, a born diplomat and ing and tactful, were always accessible and always courteous. Such qualities, supplementing unquestioned taste and originality, proved so compelling that by the end of a dozen years the annual income of the house of Paquin was about four hundred thousand dollars. Today it is probably far in excess of that figure. Aside from her interest in the establishment, Madame Paquin draws a salary of sixty thousand dollars. The detail of business is enormous. A small army is employed not only in designing, experimenting, and making, but also in scouting for new ideas to be modified or exaggerated. Then there are the 'mannequins,'-who exhibit the costumes in the showrooms, consequence who wear the latest creations on the stage or at the races."

"A Royal Slave."

"A Royal Slave" is one of most elaborate and beautifully melodramatic productions on the road. The scenery is the finest that studios can furnish and is painted from photographs made in Mexico. The costumes and stage accessories are very rich and the powerful and thrilling dramatic situations make the play a series of beautiful stage pictures Through it is a melodrama of the sensational sort, there is not a shot fired during the entire play, and it is possessed of real literary and dramatic merit of a high order.

This great production represents more than half a year's work by an able corps of scenic artists and skilled mechanics, and will give our people a chance to see, not only the beautiful scenic equipment, but decidedly the most original play on the stage of this history.

It is something to be able to say that at least we can herald the coming of the new play, full of new ideas, situations and startling effects. Such is true, however, of the forthcoming production of "A Royal Slave. which is put on in a most artistic manner complete in every detail. Mr Clarence Bennett has always brough us the finest attractions and he assures us this is his best. The play will be seen at Dr. Beans Opera House

Constant Sufferer From Chronic Catarrh Relieved by

Bourland, San Saba, Texas, writes: "For twenty-three years I was a constant sufferer from chronic catarrh. I had a severe misery and burning in the top of my head There was almost a continual dropping of mucus into my throat, which caused frequent expecto ration. My entire system gradually became involved, and my condition

had an incessant cough and frequent attacks of bilious colic, from which it seemed I could not recover. My bowels also became affected, causing alarming attacks of hemorrhages. I tried many remedies, which gave only temporary relief or no relief at all. I at last tried Peruna, and in three days I was relieved of the bowel derangement. After using five bottles I was entirely cured. I most cheerfully recommend the use of Peruna to any one similarly afflicted."
